"Fourteen"

At last, I got my hands on a M14.

After a love call lasting over two years, I could finally meet her.

Damn, she just can't be this cute!
It's only human to want to touch something this cute. I had bought previously (like, about a year ago) an ART II M14 scope through Yahoo auctions.
She's dressed up in an early type hole handguard and a cotton sling.

And for today's main course...

A 10-round magazine!
Tah-dah!
When it was G3's turn, she had a 10-round mag into her to stress her image as a sniper rifle. But this has nothing to do with that concept!

Cute.
Yes, it's cute!
Yes, it's cute!

This was so important, I had to say it twice.

Look! Look at this modest little magazine just peeping out of the stock!

Aw, geez!
We'r talking about an overwhelming level of cuteness here.

Touchable? Oh, so touchable!

This is Tennouji, living on happy, happy days.

FAL, ARE YOU GIRLS DOING YOUR NEW YEAR'S EVE SHOPPING?
YOU TOO G3? MUST BE HARD WITH SO MANY SISTERS
YES, G36 WILL BE HOME TONIGHT AS WELL.
I HAVE TO PREPARE A LOT OF FIREWORKS
FIREWORKS?
Yes
BUT IT WOULD SEEM THAT THEY DON'T SELL THEM ANYWHERE...
FAL, WOULD YOU KNOW WHERE?
THEN, I WISH YOU A HAPPY NEW YEAR
Bye Bye
...WHAT'S SHE GONNA DO WITH FIRE-WORKS?
...WHO KNOWS?

※ In Germany, during New Year's Eve, people celebrate with large ammounts of fireworks.

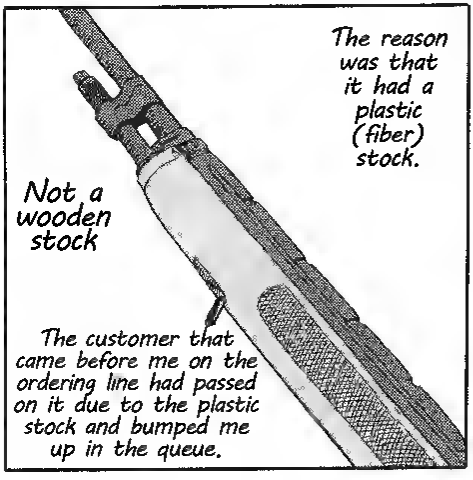
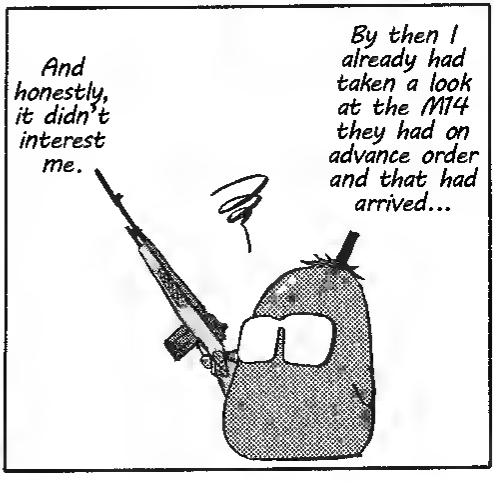
SNAP
The Tavor 21 is the Israeli Army's service rifle, and it was the first time a deactivated specimen came to Japan.
One day of October, I was taking pictures of a Tavor 21 at the deactivated weapons store, Chicago Regimentals

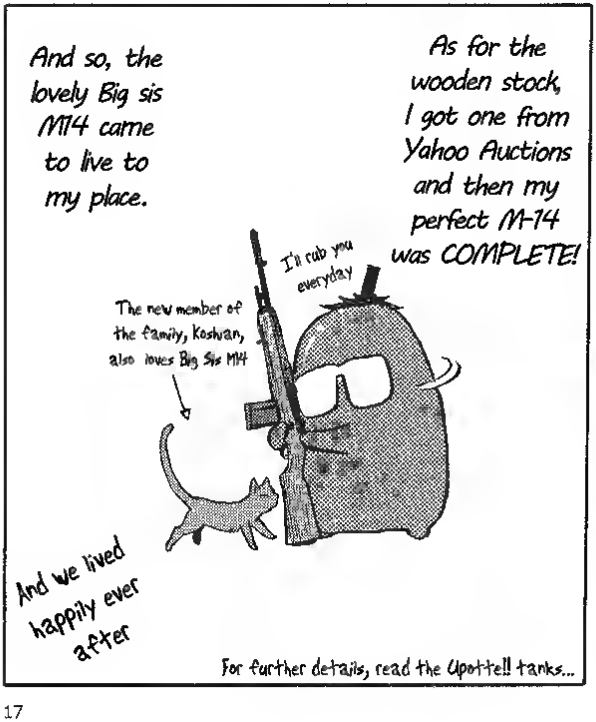


Not a wooden stock
The reason was that it had a plastic (fiber) stock.
The customer that came before me on the ordering line had passed on it due to the plastic stock and bumped me up in the queue.

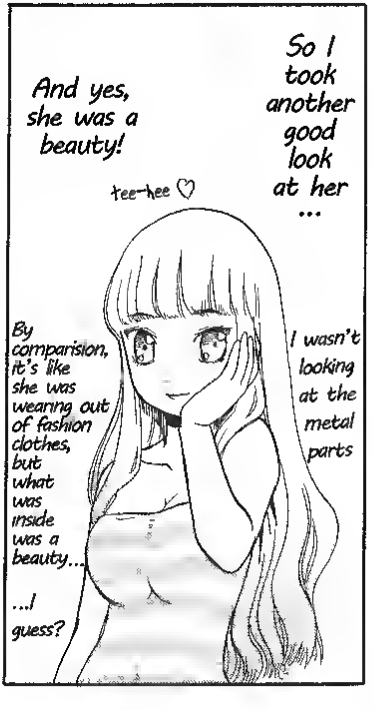


And honestly, it didn't interest me.
By then I already had taken a look at the M14 they had on advance order and that had arrived...

According to what the store clerk said, most of the M14s that entered Japan were captures from the Vietnam War, which meant that they were exposed to high temperatures and humidity and many of them suffered serious degradation as a consequence. In particular, the metal parts in contact with wood had suffered the most, he said that he had never seen a m14 that had them looking this nice.



And so, the lovely Big sis M14 came to live to my place.
As for the wooden stock, I got one from Yahoo Auctions and then my perfect M-14 was COMPLETE!
I'll rub you everyday
The new member of the family, Koshuan, also loves Big Sis M14
And we lived happily ever after
For further details, read the Upattell tanks...



And yes, she was a beauty!
So I took another good look at her ...
tee-hee ♡
By comparision, it's like she was wearing out of fashion clothes, but what was inside was a beauty...
...I guess?
I wasn't looking at the metal parts
